

Stop work authority

- If you observe a work activity at Fermilab that appears to pose an imminent danger to yourself or others, you shall immediately request that the activity stop. This shall be done verbally with the personnel involved in the activity, or through the managers of the activity.
- If you have been asked to stop an activity because it appears to pose an imminent danger you must immediately comply with the request.
- The activity may only restart after the hazard has been abated and all involved agree that it is safe to resume. Dissenting opinions must be elevated up the management chain until a resolution is reached.
- See Technical Appendix 2 of FESHM 1010 for full details of stop work authority, including the process for subcontractor work stops.
